DAVIDE PALARDI

Once a land of ambush and hardship, Malpasso is reborn in the work of Davide Palardi as a symbol of metamorphosis. Between two raw olive wood planks, evoking wild hillsides, a path of light opens in white Carrara marble. The artist transforms the memory of peril into a present of peace, proving that every wound of the earth and the soul can bloom into beauty at the foot of Mount Etna. NADER GAMMAS

'Vessels'- Inspired by Nader Gammass's hikes in the Blue Hills Reserve in Massachusetts, he would occasionally come across fallen tress in various states of decomposition. Even though the tree itself is dead, life still persists in a continuous cycle. Among it's harbours sprout fungi and mushroom. Observing this 'wild' growth struck curiosity about the different types of fungus, specifically of the Sarcoscypha genus that grow on dead wood. The apothecium, or 'cups', act as vessels for illumination. They are playfully arranged in various compositions. Visit nadergammass.com
